VIII. Certain observations on the international application

The following observations on the clarity of the claims, description, and drawings or on the question whether the claims are fully supported by the description, are made: see separate sheet

Conc rning S ction III:

Claims 1-7 relate to subject-matter considered by this Authority to be covered by the provisions of Rule 67.1(iv) PCT. Consequently, no opinion will be formulated with respect to the industrial applicability of the subject-matter of these claims (Article 34(4)(a)(i) PCT).

Concerning Section V:

The following documents mentioned in the search report are considered as the relevant state of the art. The numbering will be adhered to in the rest of the procedure:

D1: WO 98 22084 A (PROCTER & GAMBLE) 28 May 1998 (1998-05-28)

D2: EP-A-0 638 308 (DOW CORNING) 15 February 1995 (1995-02-15)

Document D1 discloses a skin care composition (see p.3, lines 1-25) comprising a) an anhydrous silicone mixture comprising

- an ethylene oxide/propylene oxide silicone copolymer i)
- an ethylene oxid silicone copolymer ii)
- iii) a silicone gum
- a silicone fluid and iv)

b) water

Document D2 (see abstract, and claims) describes a water-in-volatile silicone emulsion gel having skin moisturizing qualities, which is formed by mixing an oil phase with a water phase.

The oil phase contains a siloxane polyether (p.2, line 31) and may contain other ingredients in addition such as waxes, especially alkylmethylsiloxane wax (p.3, line 43). Non-volatile silicones (p.3, line 58 to p.4, line 2) are useful in the oil phase as film formers having a viscosity from 100 to 10.000 mm<sup>2</sup>/s. Another useful silicone film forming material is a silicone gum (p.4, lines 23-30) such as the hydroxy terminated dimethylsilicone polymer. Finally a volatile silicone (p.4, lines 45-51) may be employed in the oil phase having a viscosity from 0.65 to 5.0 mm<sup>2</sup>/s at 25°C.

Hexamethyldisiloxane was found to be especially useful (p.5, line 5-6).

The subject-matter of claims 1-7 is considered to be novel over the prior art within the meaning of Article 33(2) PCT, since no method of treating topical scars with a composition as claimed in claim 1 was disclosed in D1 or D2.

Claim 8 refers to a medical applicator and/or a packaging device and is therefore a product claim. A product should be defined by the technical features of the product as such and not by functional features of an intended use. In interpreting claims for determining novelty, non distinctive characteristics of a particular intended use should be disregarded. Hence, the subject-matter of claim 8 discloses nothing more than the device per se.

The subject-matter of claims 8 and 9 is not novel within the meaning of Article 33 (2) PCT, since medical applicators such as roller-ball pens are known in the art.

The problem to be solved can be seen as to provide a method of treating or preventing topical scars. The posed solution is the use of the topical scar therapy agent of claim 1. The applicant explains in the description that a major factor in scar treatment or prophylaxis is to reduce loss of skin moisture or to actively provide skin hydration. Document D2 discloses a gel comprising an oil phase and a water phase, in which the oil phase comprises organosilicone compounds and the use of said gel for moisturizing skin. Therefore document D2 discloses an alternative solution to the posed problem. In view of D2 a skilled person was bound to expect that the composition of claim 1 would solve the problem.

Hence, the subject-matter of claims 1-9 does not involve an inventive step, as required by Article 33(3) PCT.

For the assessment of the present claims 1-7 on the question whether they are industrially applicable, no unified criteria exist in the PCT Contracting States. The patentability can also be dependent upon the formulation of the claims. The EPO, for example, does not recognize as industrially applicable the subject-matter of claims to the use of a compound in medical treatment, but may allow, however, claims to a known compound for first use in medical treatment and the use of such a compound for the manufacture of a medicament for a new medical treatment.

Concerning Section VI:

Certain published documents (Rule 70.10)

| Application No | Publication date | Filing date      | Priority date (valid claim) |
|----------------|------------------|------------------|-----------------------------|
| Patent No      | (day/month/year) | (day/month/year) | (day/month/year)            |
| US6093408      | 25 July 2000     | 25 October 1996  |                             |
| EP1016400      | 5 July 2000      | 30 April 1999    | 30 April 1998               |

Concerning Section VIII:

Claims 4 and 6 refer to claim 3 or 1 respectively. They are defined as the medical applicator and /or packaging device and not as a method. Since the technical features disclosed refer to the method and also the dependency is from a method claim, it is presumed that the applicant intended to further define the method of claim 1. Consequently all claims 1-7 were examined as if they were method claims. (see also Section III)

The term packaging device is not clear. Packaging has two different meanings, first the material to pack something and second the action of packing. Therefore a packaging device could be the packing but also a machine for packing.

The wording of claim 4 is not clear. It could be understood that the mixture of silicone fluids has a viscosity of 20mm<sup>2</sup>/s at 25°C and 12,500mm<sup>2</sup>/s at 25°C. Or it could be understood that the silicone fluid consists of a mixture of several silicone fluids, one having a viscosity of 20mm<sup>2</sup>/s at 25°C and the other of 12,500mm<sup>2</sup>/s at 25°C.
